Definitions: Nine Target Populations

Public Safety: Grants that support broad public or justice agency initiatives with no defined beneficiary. Example grants include data-sharing and public outreach initiatives. Public outreach initiatives correspond with SIMS Intercept 0.

At-Risk: Grants that support prevention or diversion activities targeted to individuals that are not currently justice-involved (have no open cases and are not on probation or parole). Example grants include pre-file diversion programs, training staff in crisis intervention, and funds to hire law enforcement. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercepts 0 or 1.)

Pretrial: Defendants who have been released on bail, their own recognizance, or on pretrial supervision after a criminal court case has been filed against them, rather than being incarcerated while awaiting trial. Pretrial defendants must abide by conditions established by the court and must report to pretrial services. Example grants include bus passes and therapy programs for pretrial defendants, as well as funds to hire prosecutors and public defenders. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 2.)

Pre-Prosecution Diversion: In exchange for a defendant's agreement to participate in a pre-prosecution diversion program, the prosecutor has requested the court suspend/temporarily dismiss prosecution. The prosecutor may elect to re-open the case if the defendant commits a new crime or otherwise does not comply with the terms of the pre-prosecution diversion program (Section 31-16A-7 NMSA 1978). Example grants include funding for portions of the pre-prosecutive diversion program, such as monitoring or therapy. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 2.)

Treatment Courts: Pre- and/or post-plea defendants participating in treatment (specialty) courts that are overseen by the New Mexico Department for Therapeutic Justice. New Mexico has drug courts, behavioral health courts, family violence courts, and other treatment courts, depending on the JD. Defendants are not considered to be on probation, nor are they participating in a diversion program. Participants' cases may be re-adjudicated if the defendant does not successfully complete treatment court requirements. CRGA grants may cover the entire cost of some small treatment courts, but more typically cover components of a treatment court, such as the purchase of incentives or training for professionals who work with participants. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 3.)

Incarcerated: Defendants in custody either pre-trial or after prosecution. Examples include programs to purchase computers for currently incarcerated offenders to complete online treatment programs. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 3.)

Re-Entry: Examples include transition housing and supply pantries for people who have recently completed a jail or prison sentence. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 4.)

Probation and Parole: Some therapeutic programs have been made available to individuals on probation or parole (i.e. community corrections). Often, the programs also serve people in treatment courts, and possibly at-risk individuals as well. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercepts 3, 4 and 5.)

Competency: These individuals were found to be incompetent for purposes of adjudication. Example grants include providing training for treatment guardians. (This population corresponds with SIMS Intercept 5.)
